

Design / Fashion Editor Role Specification

Background Information

Miro Magazine is an independent, high-end, online publication offering a unique perspective on the very best emerging talent.

With a team of young, ambitious and pioneering individuals, Miro is here to support, promote and inspire popular culture. Our smart, bold take on British culture aims to champion and showcase career starters whilst allowing our readership to learn from interviews and features with established industry professionals. We aim to become a home for creativity; a place to be discovered and to discover.

Miro has only been publishing since June 2017 and already reaches over 20,000 people each month. We were nominated for Best Online Publication at the 2017 Theatre and Technology Awards – four months after we began publishing.

Nature and Scope of the Role

As Miro Magazine works towards an official launch, the core purpose of the role will be to work with the Editor-in-Chief to establish the publication's Design section which aims to focus on fashion, art, graphic design and photography.

This is an exciting opportunity for a budding, passionate editor to shape the future of this section and to have a real influence on the future of our fledging publication which continues to grow rapidly. It is an unpaid, freelance opportunity and as such you'll be able to give as little or as much free time as you can.

Core Responsibilities

- To oversee Miro Magazine's Design section
- Write, assign and generate original online design content
- To provide insight into the fashion / arts scene and for this to be reflected in all relevant editorial
- Edit and proof all editorial content in accordance with our house style guide
- To actively establish and maintain relationships with contributors and photographers
- Attend monthly editorial meetings
- Network with PRs and other important figures at industry events
- Work with the editorial team to raise the profile of the publication

About You

We're looking for someone who is charged with ideas. You'll be curious, open-minded and ready to voice your own opinions.

Miro can provide an opportunity to express yourself. It's an opportunity for you to unearth the future of British culture and to share your thoughts on contemporary society. Your work will be the first link between our readers and our brand so have confidence in your voice, thoughts and opinion – they will mean everything here.

Location

Anywhere in the United Kingdom. Although most of our team are currently based in London, we'd love someone to help us escape from the 'London bubble'.

To Apply

Please send a brief letter explaining your interest in the role and any previous examples of your work to josh@miromagazine.com

Please note: at present this is an unpaid, freelance opportunity, however many coffees, alcoholic beverages and the occasional cake will be provided.

For more information or if you have any questions, please don't hesitate to contact Miro's Editor-in-Chief, Josh Brown, on josh@miromagazine.com
